OTTO PLANETTA MUST PAY WITH LIFE FOR THE ASSASSINATION OF DOLLFUSS; FOUND GUILTY BY MILITARY TRIBUNAL

Same Court Imposes Death Sentence Upon Franz Holzweber

THE TRIAL WAS BRIEF

Court Rules That No More Testimony Is Necessary

By Alfred Tyrnauer
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

VIENNA, July 31—Otto Planetta, stocky, ruddy-faced soldier, must pay with his life for the assassination of the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss. A Military Tribunal found him guilty today and sentenced him to death.

The same Court imposed the death sentence upon Franz Holzweber, a wiry, dark-haired electrician. Holzweber was found guilty of high treason. Both will be hung.

The death sentence was imposed by the Court within a few minutes after attorneys for the state and for the defense had completed their summations of the evidence. Even the summations were brief, requiring only one hour and a half for the Court summarily halted the taking of evidence, declaring no more testimony was necessary.

VIENNA, July 31—The Austrian government had the jitters today as the Court Martial of the 144 Nazis, caught in the Chancellery in the big "putsch," went on. A state of alarm ruled throughout Vienna and the situation was regarded as far more serious than a renewed outbreak in the fighting which was reported from Corinthia.

Dr. Anton Rintelin, whom 40 armed Nazis attempted to rescue yesterday from the Municipal Hospital, was removed to a prison hospital for safer keeping.

Vienna had another Nazi scare during the night and machine guns were manned while troops marched and counter-marched. Everyone feels under surveillance in this city which is known to contain thousands of armed Nazis ready to spring into action if hope for their cause appears.

BERLIN, Germany, July 31—Victor Lutze, commander of the Nazis "brown shirt" storm troops, announced today the vacation of the storm troops which began after the "Roehm revolt" on June 30th would end tomorrow and troops would resume their duties.

VIENNA, July 31—(INS)—The military tribunal trying Otto Planetta, 36-year-old soldier charged with firing the shots that killed Chancellor Dollfuss, and Franz Holzweber, 30, leader of the Nazis, who seized the Chancellery, suddenly halted its proceedings just before noon today declaring further testimony unnecessary.

An immediate verdict and pronouncement of sentence were expected.

Dr. Jerabeck, Planetta's defense counsel, attempted to call the Chancellor and the President of Austria as witnesses. He was ruled down.

The State had begun a summation to be followed by three defense attorneys.

Troopers Unable To Find Man Who Robbed Woman

Efforts to find the man who yesterday morning at about 10 o'clock held up a Croydon woman and took $4 from her, were unsuccessful.

The hold-up occurred along the State Road near the Badger school. The highway is frequently traveled at this point and a factory is located directly across the roadway, but some distance back from the road.

Mrs. Elizabeth McKay, State Road, was the woman held-up and robbed and she reported the matter to Justice of Peace, James Laughlin. Judge Laughlin arming himself and with the assistance of others and two State troopers from Morrisville, made a thorough search of the woods and nearby buildings, in an effort to find the man.

Every inch of the woods was covered and the vicinity thoroughly gone over but nothing was seen of the man.

THE PRICE OF A MANAGED ECONOMY

By FRANK KNOX

Editor and Publisher of the Chicago Daily News

In this, the seventh of the series of articles written by Mr. Frank Knox editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, he deals with conditions in Russia as he found them upon a recent tour.

ARTICLE SEVEN

REGIMENTATION AND STARVATION

Paris, France, June 7.

Curiously enough it has been from Secretary Wallace of the department of agriculture and his assistant, Rexford Tugwell, that Americans have heard the most respectful and complimentary references to the Russian experiment in planned economy. This is noteworthy. While something of a case might be made out of the factory worker under the Communist system as practiced in Russia, farm conditions are intolerable, and the state of the Russian peasant is wretched beyond description. Any attempt to impose upon American farmers anything remotely approaching conditions on the best conducted Russian collective farms would provoke armed resistance at once.

Sixty-five per cent of the Russian peasants, I learned in Moscow, are now established on collective farms. The remaining 35 per cent are individual farmers, nominally owning their farms and selling for their own benefit such of their products as are left after the tax collector has taken over the larger part for the state.

The collective farms are of two types. The first is known as the "artel," in which only the land and the horses are pooled, and the individual is permitted to retain his house, garden, chickens, pigs and so on. The second is the "commune" type, in which everything is pooled and life is wholly communistic, with common living quarters, common dining room and common arrangements for the care of children. The latter form has proved unsatisfactory and ultimately all farms are to be of the "artel" model.

The foreman of each collective farm is appointed by the political leader of the region. He lays out all of the work of the farm, assisted by a so-called expert from the nearest tractor station. At every tractor station there is a "political section" of six or seven men, appointed by the party leaders. They determine the disposal of the land and how the work shall be carried on. They supervise the harvesting and enforce the collection of the state's share of the crops. Every farmer has his work assigned to him and at the end of the year is credited with the number of days of work he has done. Upon that basis the peasant shares in the fruits of his year of toil. After the government has taken its share, the remainder of the crop is sold, either to the city co-operatives or on the open market, and the proceeds are divided, each peasant receiving a share proportionate to the amount of work he has contributed. If, in addition to his work on the collective farm, a farmer has some garden produce, chickens or pigs to sell, he must pay an additional heavy tax on those sales.

In the sustained effort to put all farming upon a collective basis, the lot of the individual farmer is made extremely hard. He is forced to pay taxes in kind, and if he sells for cash he must pay part of the proceeds to the state. The average

STATE AGENTS RAID PICNIC FOR THIRD TIME

Arrest Man at Entrance Who Assumed Full Responsibility

HEARING IS CONTINUED

ANDALUSIA, July 31—For the third time this season the picnic grounds at Andalusia Park here were raided on Sunday. The place was again visited by the agents of the State Liquor Control Board in their effort to break up the practice of staging these events here.

One arrest was made and last night John Zawistoski, 4104 Elbridge street, Philadelphia, was given a hearing before Justice of Peace James Guy in the Municipal Building at Bristol.

According to the evidence produced at the hearing one of the state agents attended the picnic on Sunday. He is alleged to have purchased admission and is also said to have bought checks which entitled him to what he said was beer. After he had purchased the beer he left the park and summoned other agents.

Zawistoski, who is said to have been at the entrance, is reported to have assumed full responsibility for the conduct of those at the picnic. He was arrested and summoned for the hearing last night.

At the hearing Zawistoski was represented by Clarence J. Buckman, Esquire, and the defendant denied that he had committed any crime. He was given until next Monday night to produce the man who is said to have sold the beer.

Attorney Buckman argued that no crime had been committed and that the agents didn't even have a sample of the alleged beer.

Zawistoski was charged with illegal sale and placed under bond to produce the man next Monday or stand trial himself for the alleged offense.

Many complaints have been received about the picnics conducted here on Sundays and a determined effort is being made to break-up the disorder.

SHE CRIED FOR JOY

(By "The Stroller")

We had the pleasure the other afternoon of reading for a mother of foreign birth a letter from her son who has been away from home for eight years.

In her broken dialect this fond mother asked us to read the message which her son had penned to her. He is now a member of the American Army on foreign soil. He asked about the health of his parents and inquired whether or not his brother had graduated.

He enclosed his picture which showed him to be physically fit. Over and over again the mother commented upon the missive and I had difficulty reading it, as she often burst into weeping and frequently dried her eyes with her handkerchief.

I wish that son could have witnessed the joy of his mother.

LOWER BUILDING COSTS

Building has lagged behind other industries in the slow, tedious climb out of stagnation and the reasons are restricted credit and high prices. People have been unable to borrow for construction purposes and if they could building costs have been exorbitant measured on a basis of sound financing.

There had to be a break some time and it has come; the lumber industry taking the first step. The Lumber Code Authority has approved of prices cuts by manufacturers and retailers which mean a 15 per cent saving for the builder.

Construction will find in this a real impetus, since lumber is a major item in all house construction and in most other building. A 15 per cent saving on his lumber bill is an almost irresistible incentive for the prospective home builder to point his stakes for the survivors.

Now if the building trades would agree to reasonable wages the country would witness a rapid recovery for the entire building industry. Labor costs, especially in the larger communities, have continued prohibitive in comparison with other costs. Some trades could accept a 50 per cent reduction in their wage scales and still draw a larger hourly wage than most professional men.

PAY AND POPULARITY

A child moving picture actress, now receiving $150 a week, is demanding through her father, as her manager, an increase to $2,500 a week.

It may be that she has unusual talent which gives her a box-office attraction far above that which any other child would possess. And it is the box-office pull that determines the size of salaries in the moving picture world. An actor or actress may have the greatest possible talent, as measured by the highest artistic standards, but if this is not the kind that appeals to popular fancy and brings dollars into the box office the possessor of such talent never gets high on the pay roll.

Often the mere fact, or supposition, that a film actor receives an unusually high salary is sufficient to increase his drawing power. Producing companies, therefore, are pleased when reports get abroad that a star is in the high figures even though he may not be. Exaggerated reports of salaries sometimes are encouraged by the companies.

The company now employing the child asking $2,500 a week probably doesn't intend to grant the demand, and the father of the little girl probably doesn't expect her to receive the amount asked. The publicity she is receiving, nevertheless, will prove valuable to her and may even cause the employing company to give her more than it would have done had the matter been settled quietly at the start.

GRASS

Who of you, has ever seen?
A fairer sight—than grasses green?
Which clothes in velvet, Earth's scar'd breast.

The Mother bosom Nature blest;
Where lowing cattle in the field
And all live things some homage yield,
No greater gift from Maker's hand
Than Grass—which covers all the land.

For Grass that carpets every slope,
The Emblem of Ethereal hope;
The things not seen, but sensed as part
Of Pastures Green for Hungry Hearts,
There's nothing greater in the mass
That girds the Earth—than Blades of Grass.

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON and MALCOLM LOGAN

CHAPTER XXX

"You wrote it?" Finn exclaimed.

"The question was ridiculous, but I could understand why the sheriff asked it. It was a testimonial to the confidence he had placed in the doctor. To some extent we had all shared that faith, for even I, prepared to some extent by Mark's speculations about the note that disappeared, was startled to hear the admission. The sheriff was more than startled; his tone was reproachful and injured.

John Calvert continued to smile. There was a reckless gaiety in his reply. "That's obvious, isn't it? Because I didn't want you to know."

I expected Finn to work himself into one of his sudden rages, but he had not yet recovered from his astonishment. He gulped and said, "What did you say in it?"

"Just what Felipa told you. I said I wanted to talk to her and I would come to the cottage the next morning to see her."

Mark was watching the doctor intently, with a slight frown. It was impossible to obtain from his expression any clue to his thoughts. Sue sat on the edge of her chair. Her lips moved slightly and she looked as though she were about to cry.

The sheriff tugged at his mustache and turned back to Felipa. "Why did you run away?" he demanded. "Didn't you want to see Dr. Calvert?"

"No," she whispered.

"Why not?"

"She wet her lips. 'I was scared.'"

"Scared of him?"

"The girl nodded. The doctor said, 'Tell me—' The sheriff interrupted coldly. 'Let her answer. Why were you scared of him?'

"She hesitated. When finally she replied she kept her eyes averted from the doctor. Her voice was barely audible.

"I thought he killed Mr. Vail."

Sue cried indignantly, "I never heard of anything so ridiculous!"

Dr. Calvert looked gravely at her. "Thanks," he said.

"Where did you get that idea?" the sheriff asked.

"They have a big fight that morning," she said. "I hear them. Dr. Calvert, he says to Mr. Vail, 'Some day I'll kill you, Vail,' and Mr. Vail laugh. I was in the living room, and I hear them. Just before Dr. Calvert says that, I hear Mr. Vail say, 'You leave her out of this, Calvert,—something like that.'"

"Is that true?" Finn asked Dr. Calvert.

"It's true that we quarreled."

"You ran away because you were afraid Dr. Calvert would do something to you?" Mark asked the maid sharply.

Felipa nodded.

"Then he knew you had heard his quarrel with Vail?"

"Yes, sir."

"How did he know you had heard them?"

"She colored. 'I was beside the door when he came out.'"

"What time of the morning was that?"

"When the doctor made his rounds. He saw Mr. Vail last."

"How was it you were the only person who heard this quarrel?"

"Mr. Ruxton was on exercise," she answered. "Mr. Clendening was on the porch by his room and Mr. Cross, he was in his room with his door shut. They talk low, the doctor and Mr. Vail."

"Take her out," Finn said to the deputy. When they had left, he turned to the doctor. "Well," he said. "What you got to say about it?"

"It's true that Vail and I quarreled," the doctor answered. "I may even have said I would kill him. I knew that Felipa heard us and I could tell that afternoon that she was afraid of me and suspected me. I wanted to see her and convince her that I hadn't killed him. When she ran away, she left the note I wrote her, and I took the opportunity to get it back. I quarreled with Vail, sheriff, but I didn't kill him."

"He was the calmest of us all as he stood there facing the sheriff."

"I don't know whether you believe me," he added. "I can't wonder if you don't."

"I do," Sue said. "You couldn't do it, I know."

The doctor's whole face lighted up as he smiled at her.

"I know you didn't, too, and I'll prove it!" Mark said.

The sheriff snapped at him, "I'll do the talking, Mr. Hilmyer. Now, what did you have an argument with Vail about?"

The doctor hesitated perceptibly and then said, "It was about money. Vail was a patient of mine several years ago in New York. He made a lot of money in the bull market, and he persuaded me to try my luck. We were caught in the crash and lost almost all we'd put in."

He smiled bitterly. "Doctors seem to be born suckers. We went in again in the summer of 1930, in a joint account. We believed the great minds who said we'd turned the corner. Well, we bought at the top of the summer flurry and got caught again. Vail put up a lot of margin and lost it all. I was repaying him in installments."

"So that's why he could afford Sherwood Forest," Mark said softly.

The doctor nodded. He went on in a level, emotionless voice. "On Thursday morning Vail demanded two hundred dollars immediately. I told him it was all I had in bank. He insisted and we quarreled over it. I lost my temper because I thought he was being unreasonable."

"Did he tell you why he wanted the money?" Mark asked eagerly.

John Calvert shook his head. "No, I asked him, but he wouldn't say. Finally I agreed to get it for him. I gave it to him just before lunch."

"You were a good friend of his?"

Finn asked.

"No," the doctor said. "I was not his friend."

"But all the same you took practically every cent you could scrape up to give him?"

The doctor nodded. "I owed him the money," he said.

I looked away from him. It was difficult to believe, and I wanted to believe him. The sheriff put his finger on another weak spot in the story immediately.

"What was this about a woman he said to you?"

"We said nothing about any woman. She was mistaken."

The sheriff looked incredulous. "You say you paid him the five hundred just before lunch. What became of it?"

"I have no idea."

"It wasn't in the room when we searched it."

"No."

"Can you prove you paid it to him?"

"Yes. If you'll call my bank, you'll find out that I drew it out that morning, and I have a receipt he gave me."

"How much did you owe him altogether?"

"Ten thousand dollars."

The sheriff whistled. "How long have you been paying him back?"

"Two years," the doctor answered.

"Why did you pay him the five hundred?" Finn asked suddenly.

"Was it because you wanted to keep him quiet?"

The doctor nodded. "It would hurt my position here to have it become known," he said.

"You were anxious to keep the quarrel quiet too, weren't you?"

"Yes. As I said, I knew Felipa heard it, and I knew she suspected me. I telephoned her that afternoon from this room, but she wouldn't talk to me. That evening I wrote her the note. I was certain I could convince her I was innocent if she'd only talk to me, and I didn't want anything to get out about the quarrel."

"How were you going to explain to her about what Vail said about dragging this woman into it?" the sheriff asked.

"I was going—" The doctor broke off suddenly. "Vail didn't say anything about a woman," he said.

"And you were going to tell her that, even though you didn't know she imagined she heard something said about a woman?" the sheriff said.

"I'm sorry, doc, but you slipped that time. I guess I'll have to ask you to come along with me—that is, unless you can prove an airtight alibi."

The doctor made a gesture of surrender. "I can't," he said. "I was in the X-ray room, reading some plates, when Vail was killed. Well, what are you waiting for? Why don't you arrest me?"

"All right," the sheriff said.

"Come on."

Sue stood up and looked at the doctor. "Isn't there something I can do?" she asked. "Can't I help you?"

He smiled at her. "Don't worry," he said, "that's all."

He went out with the sheriff, holding his head high. There was a silence after he had gone. Then Sue said, "I know he's innocent! Oh, Mr. Hilmyer, can't you do something?"

Mark grinned. "Sure he's innocent, and, well, we'll get him out of it."

But I knew he must be thinking how flimsy the doctor's story was, and how the sheriff had tripped him up when he had said that he and Vail were not quarreling over a woman.

When the sheriff led John Calvert out of Mark's room, a patient who was going with the doctor into the office of Anderson, the business manager. Perhaps it was the same patient who overheard part of the loud and bitter argument that ensued there. By some means, when I went to lunch, everyone was talking of Clendening's death, of Felipa's return and of the detention of the doctor.

"I can't believe Dr. Calvert did it," one of the woman patients protested to me almost with tears. "He's always been so kind to me. Nothing any patient asks him to do is too much trouble."

"Who started this story that he was suspected?" I asked her. "I don't believe there's a word of truth in it."

"I was told that one of the patients heard Anderson arguing with the sheriff, trying to keep him from arresting the doctor," one of the men said. "Have you heard anything about how Clendening died?"

"I was there," I said. He died of heart disease."

But nothing I could say could stop the growing panic. The events of the morning revived all the hysteria of the days before the coroner's inquest. During lunch a woman suddenly became hysterical and was carried out of the room. Patients began to pack and the new exodus started that afternoon. Not even the appearance at luncheon of Dr. Calvert, unguarded and impassive, could check that returning wave of fear. That day and the next, more than twenty patients left.

"The place will be empty in a few more days if this doesn't stop," Mark said soberly that afternoon.

From him I learned the reason for the surprising appearance of Dr. Calvert at lunch. Once more Anderson had fought with Finn to preserve the appearance of tranquility at Sherwood Forest. It required, I imagine, all the power that he could exert, and it strained his relations with the sheriff very seriously.

Twice before he had dissuaded Finn from making an arrest. That first victory had resulted in Felipa's flight, and the second in Joe Barker's death. An astute politician, Finn probably saw that the time was approaching when he would have to choose between alienating Anderson and the wealth and power he represented, and the loss of his position because of the continuation of crime at the sanatorium. He realized, too, that Anderson's strength was waning as the patients deserted.

In the end, he took Felipa to Cold Valley and had her held without bail as a material witness. Dr. Calvert was permitted to go about his duties on the understanding that he would not leave the sanatorium. A deputy followed him around, so that the result was almost as bad as an arrest would have been.

Finn, checking Dr. Calvert's story, found that he had, since his arrival, made payments to Seifert Vail averaging a hundred dollars a month. On the day of the singer's death he had cashed a $500 check at the bank in the village, reducing his account to a few dollars. This and all the other checks representing payments to Vail were drawn to cash, but Dr. Calvert had produced receipts for them.

Mark blamed himself bitterly for involving John Calvert.

"Bob," he said on the day after the doctor had told his story, "the next time I stick my nose in other people's business, I hope somebody punches it. If I hadn't played the detective, John wouldn't be in this mess. Now, darn it, I've got to go on with it and get him out."

PARIS.—(INS)—An unusual costume ball was given this week by the Baron Nicholas de Gunzburg at the Island Chateau in the Bois de Boulogne, which is on the lake. The period chosen was 1860, that of the Empress Eugenie, a style most flattering to women. I noted a few of the gowns of especial beauty, the Countess Georges de Castellane wearing a white satin gown with black lace ruffles on the huge crinoline. She only had diamonds as jewels. Huge, full lace flounces also decorated the skirt worn

DRAG DAY AT RACE COURSE OF AUTEUIL BRINGS OUT BERETS

By Nadia de Beaud
I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent

PARIS.—(INS)—Drag Day at the race course of Auteuil was the occasion for such a style display as even Paris rarely sees and enjoys. Curiously enough, although it was a bright and warm day, velvet berets were most in evidence. The new note is their size, resembling the beret that Rembrandt wears in the famous portrait of himself. But the modern adaptation was trimmed with aigrettes and other bits of feathers.

Probably one of the most striking effects was produced by the Princess de Faucigny-Lucinge in a pink shantung silk ensemble, matching exactly in color her coral necklace and earrings. The sleeves of the coat were of black monkey fur. Her black felt hat was trimmed with a bit of the same rose. I noticed some hats trimmed with ermine tails, that were especially attractive.

JEFFERSON A. C. WINS FROM WHITE ELEPHANTS

Yesterday afternoon on Leedom's field, Jefferson A. C. Jrs. knocked the White Elephants out of a first place tie with the Harriman No-Names, who took first place undisputedly, through their defeat. At the same time the "Mules" entered second place in a tie with the Elephants with two victories and a defeat each. The final score was 5-1.

Jim Spencer was on the mound for the "Jeffs," opposed to Howard McLaughlin. Both pitchers pitched good ball, Spencer allowing only nine hits, two coming in the last frame, while McLaughlin was nipped for seven hits.

J. A. C. won the game in the first inning, scoring three times. "Ray" Tomlinson opened the game with a single to center, stole second, and after Peltz walked, moved to third as Gibson was put out at first. McLaughlin then uncorked a wild pitch, Tomlinson scoring and Peltz moved to third. Spencer then stepped to the plate and slammed a home run to deep center. In the third, R. Tomlinson went to second on Hughes' wild throw, and scored on Gibson's single to center. Profy doubled to right in the fourth and scored on Orazi's single to right. The Elephants scored their run in the fourth on two walks and Moss's single. Both teams missed chances to score on wild base running. The features of the game were two sensational catches in left field in the seventh inning. F. Grimes ran back and stuck up his glove hand to snare Peltz's liner, roiling over after the catch. In the same frame, P. Tomlinson leaped high in the air while running and made a great one-hand catch of Grimes' drive. Both catches stopped rallies. Another feature was Spencer's long home run to center in the first inning.

The White Elephants fielded brilliantly to keep down the "Mules" score and cutting short rallies. The "Jeffs" also fielded good despite three errors and had two snappy double plays to stop rallies spurred by the Elephants.

The victory was the second straight for the Junior "Mules" and their second victory of the second half which ties them for second place with the White Elephants.

On Wednesday, J. A. C. will play the Catholic Boys on Leedom's field at 10 o'clock.

Tomorrow the Catholic Boys and the Harriman No-Names clash on Leedom's field at ten o'clock.

FIRST PLACE BATTLE STAGED HERE TONIGHT

With their grip on first place at stake the Bristol A. A. team will play the Cornwallis nine tonight on Leedom's field. At Halmesville, the Hibernians will be the guest of the Halmesville team.

The A. A. is leading the second half of the Lower Bucks circuit at the present time with six wins and two defeats while the Hibs are giving the A's a merry chase with five victories and two defeats. The Big Green has a postponed game to be played with the Cornwallis team.

Cornwallis, Halmesville and Parkland are practically eliminated from the second half race.

BRISTOL PARK A. A. LOSSES

The undefeated record of the Bristol Park A. A. for the current season was terminated when the White Elephants defeated them, 8-7. Hughes hurled effectively for the winners, limiting the losers to seven hits and striking out 10 batters. At bat for the winners Cummings, Williams and Sagolla connected for two hits each, while the losers' best was Crossley, with 3 hits.

WINN TO TRY FOR TITLE AT LANGHORNE SPEEDWAY

Billy Winn's belated drive toward two major eastern automobile racing titles, a mid-season sensation in dirt track circles, will be carried to Langhorne Speedway Saturday, August 11, when the daring Kansas City star battles for the lead of the A. A. Eastern championship race and first place in the Hankinson Speedways circuit standings.

Drawing even with Johnny Hannon after the Norristown driver had set an amazing pace through April, May and June, Winn will enter the Langhorne event with the eyes of eastern speed fans on him. Victory in the main event will send him ahead of Hannon in the point standings of both titular battles.

Since early in July when the diminutive midwesterner took over the new $10,000 Miller mount owned by Sex Perriman, wealthy Hawthorne, N. J., sportsman, the machine in which Jimmy Paterson had been killed earlier, Winn has climbed rapidly to overhaul Hannon who has led the speed kings since his triumph in the 100-mile inaugural race at Langhorne Speedway in April. In recent weeks he has defeated "Wild Bill" Cummings, Al Gordon, the Pacific coast A. A. champion, Bob Sall, the eastern A. A. titleholder, Ted Horn of Los Angeles, and many others.

Two boogys loom for Winn on the mile Langhorne oval. One is the conviction among the nation's racing stars, including Cummings, "that Hannon is unbeatable at Langhorne." The second is the widespread contention by both fans and drivers that the five foot Missourian lacks the strength and stamina to rule the mile courses as he does the half mile loops, an annoying belief which Winn has never been able definitely to disprove.

His "do or die" attempt to establish himself as a mile track star by defeating Hannon over his favorite track will be one of the many highlights of the next Langhorne Speedway card.

CATHOLIC B. C. LOSSES

Eleven innings were required by the Yankee Jrs. to set back the Catholic B. C., 9-7, Sunday afternoon on St. Ann's field. It was Hawk's single and doubles by Joe and Johnny Stallone that put the game on ice. The Yankees were leading at the ninth inning when McGee double to left. The Boys' Club threatened to score in the eleventh frame when McDevitt and Nealis singled and completed a double steal. McGee was next and fanned. Dever hit to the pitcher and McDevitt was caught coming home. Dougherty walked and McCahan hit to the shortstop who tagged second forcing Dougherty out. Johnny Stallone of the Bristol Twilight League did the hurting for the Yankees while Manager Dever twirled for the Boys' Club. It was Dever's first attempt at the mound work and he was very successful, striking out 15 and walking 4. Eddie McDevitt was the leading hitter of the day with three singles, out of 4 trips to the plate.

WHITE ELEPHANTS ARE VICTORS OVER BATH RD.

Last night on the Bath Road field, the White Elephants defeated the first half champions for the third straight time by the score of 5 to 1. "Spike" Tryon pitched a mighty line game by giving the first half champs only two hits, and should have had a shut out only for an error by Bailey in an attempt to make a double play in the fourth inning. Robinson doubled in the first and was caught going to third. Cameron singled in the sixth, stood on first and watched the next three batters strike out. The Elephants scored three in the first on Delker's double, Cummins' single, and a single by Williams, Bailey's sacrifice bunt, Nietzel then walked, and Cameron dropped Ritter's fly. Scored in the third on singles by Cummins and Nietzel and one more in the fifth on singles by Williams and Nietzel.

charged with four costly errors and did some very ragged playing. A change of pitchers also took place in this canto, Tranotti being relieved by Antonelli.

Both clubs made five hits and the winner was charged with five errors. However, in the pinches, Scordia was air-tight and pulled out of the holes in masterful style.

Local Talent Is Stressed at Show

studies in tempera for murals are shown by Miss Bessie P. Heller, while Mrs. Ethel Davenport has three water colors with her characteristic delicacy and beauty. Another type of work is a group of block prints by Don Hedges.

Ten-year-old Terrence Keenan, who lives near New Hope, has three views in pen and ink and water colors combined. The remarkable action shown by this youthful prodigy is remarked upon by all visitors to the gallery.

Terrence is the son of Peter and Marie Keenan, of Solebury Township. The father is Irish, with an exceptional record with the British troops during the World War. He is a successful illustrator for magazines and has written considerably. Mrs. Keenan is a native of Bohemia. They are not attempting to direct the artistic talent of the boy, preferring that he choose his own style and follow his own apparent art inclination. He attends the New Hope public schools.

Charles Child has included the original of one of his illustrations for the "Books of Americans" recently published, and also two bold tempera drawings, "Reign of the Tartar City" and a colored cartoon of Carrie Nation. Three water colors by Frederick W. Harer, of Uhlertown, find their subjects of distant countries, while nearby is a dry point by David Hendrickson, "Fuel," and three etchings by Adolph Blondheim. Charcoal studies and water colors by Major J. D. Nevin, U. S. Naval Reserves, are attractive, and John Folinsee contributes four most effective etchings of local scenes. This type of work by Mr. Folinsee is considered of equal merit with his better known oil paintings.

The moving of the Independent Gallery to its new location, places it in a more convenient place and the large number of visitors proves the wisdom of the change from the more Bohemian atmosphere of Mechanic Street.

The completion of the Bethlehem pike as a three-lane highway through to Sellersville on the 1934 building program of the State Highways Department is now assured.

Bids for the construction of the remaining stretch of less than two and a half miles from Houghton's corner to Sellersville will be opened August 10, and the contract awarded a short time later.

This will mean the entire stretch promised by the state department at the beginning of the work in the winter of 1932-33 will have been completed, and there will be a three-lane superhighway from Sellersville to Philadelphia.

State authorities are still silent on the stretch from Sellersville to Quakertown, on which no activity is expected this year. State Senator Buckman recently informed residents of that section that the upper end of the pike would not be put on the program during the present administration.

The section has, however, been surveyed, according to N. A. Staples, of Philadelphia, who is in charge of the engineering department in this part of the state. The engineering department, he said this morning, is ready to go ahead as soon as the state allots the money.

The pike is rapidly taking shape all along the line, since the completion of the Montgomeryville-Spring House stretch, which was the first taste local motorists had of three-lane highways. The new Spring House cutoff is now completed, and motorists take the long, sweeping curve over what was formerly farm land, and enter the Spring House intersection with considerably less danger than formerly.

The widening operations are now nearing completion between Spring House and Erdenheim, and much of this road is now being used from shoulder to shoulder with the removal of the old barricades.

The bridge below the intersection of Butler avenue, is now nearing completion, and it is open to motor traffic. Workmen are now engaged in improving the extreme lower end of the pike, between Erdenheim and Chestnut Hill, which is now closed to traffic.

The stretch north of Montgomeryville is coming along rapidly, and a great part of the concrete work is done. The macadam center lane will be laid shortly.

age individual farm does not exceed two to four acres, and life is reduced to the penury and squalor of peasant life in medieval times. But such is the tenacity with which a Russian clings to his own little farm that, even under such incredibly harsh conditions, the extension of the collective principle has been slow and difficult.

Many of the more active peasant opponents of the collective-farm idea have been sent to the mines or the forests for long terms at forced labor in order to break down the home-loving instinct.

If short crops are harvested, the government, in order to feed the industrial workers in the cities, takes virtually all, sometimes leaving not enough food for the farmer to feed his family. Only last year, because of widespread crop failure, from FOUR TO SEVEN MILLION peasants died of starvation. This year another short crop impends. The price of bread in Moscow has been doubled and fresh hardships await the peasant who must keep his family through the winter on what the tax collector leaves.

This is the story of Russian regimentation of agriculture, applied to one of the richest agricultural regions of the world. At best it provides the farmer a bare subsistence; at worst it is slow death through forcible deprivation of those very means of sustaining life which the farmer provides.
